What are the functions of the Plastic Arts?

- The Plastic Arts are a series of techniques that allow for self-expression. They possess languages that are learned. They contain grammars, vocabularies of forms, colors and light ...
- They represent access to our culture, collective memory and history.
- They sharpen our critical thinking and analytical abilities.
- They help develop our sensitivity.
- They develop our perception of the codes of representation, allowing us to be critically active instead of passive in front of images. (Compare to Advertising and Television).
- They increase our curiosity.
- They contribute to the development of the imagination.
- They stop time! When invested in a task, we live in the present moment.
- The professions that use aspects of the Plastic Arts are very numerous, as for example: illustration, engraving, painting, graphic arts, photography, ironwork, cabinetmaking, computer graphics, museum curatorship, gallery ownership, landscape architecture, teaching, publicity, design, architecture ... and the list goes on.
